Scanlan's Printed in Canada

NEW YORK (AP)—Scanlan's Monthly, which accused union printers here of refusing to work on an issue titled "Guerrilla Warfare in the United States," has had the issue printed in Canada.

Tom Humber, managing editor of the eight-month-old magazine, said 8,000 copies of the magazine were flown to San Francisco for sale. The remaining 95,000 copies are being trucked to New York, he said. The magazine last appeared in September.

Humber said another dispute in Canada threatened to delay publication there when one bindery refused to work on the magazine. Another binder did the job, he said.

Scanlan's difficulties arose Oct. 1 when editorial material for the 113-page issue was delivered to Barnes Press Inc., a 54-year-old New York City printing concern.

There are varied accounts of what happened next.

But on Oct. 2 Scanlan's filed a $1.2 million damage suit in U.S. District Court here against Barnes and Local 1 of the Amalgamated Lithographers of America, AFL-CIO. And the magazine began shopping for a new printer.

Scanlan's charged the union members with refusing to work on the special issue because they considered the content "detrimental to the United States."

The magazine also sought a court order compelling Barnes and the lithographers to print the magazine. The request was denied, leaving the suit to wait its turn for trial.

The union president, Edward Swayduck, conceded in an affidavit submitted in connection with the suit that his men had "raised some questions" about the material because they believed it to be "revolutionary in nature" and "dealt with the making of bombs."

When advised of the situation, Swayduck said in the affidavit, he told the lithographers that "an employee did not have the right to refuse to work on a job because of the fact that he disagreed with the content of the finished product. He said 'the men have been and are now ready to perform the work in question.'"

Repeated attempts to reach Swayduck for further comment failed.

Humber said the new printer is Payette and Payette, a printing firm at St. Johns, Nova Scotia.
